

Emergency Contact Information

Hurricane season can be a stressful time for South Florida residents. There are many actions that you will need to take in order to prepare for the season. One of the actions needed for hurricane/disaster preparation is to develop a plan to keep in touch with your family.

Since your family cannot be together 24 hours a day, it is very possible that your family may not be together when a disaster strikes. It is very important that you have a plan ready before an emergency occurs. This plan should outline to you, your friends and family where you will stay in case a hurricane/disaster strikes. In addition, plan how to contact one another and who can be notified that you are safe and communicate your location to other family members.

Think about how you will communicate in different situations. Create a contact card for each family member. Share your plan with other family members so they will know what to expect.
